First off let me say I think MS is getting off way to easy period. You allow the Giant to continue doing business as usual while they play the wounded lamb. But enough of my personal rants. If MS is going to be giving anything to the community the last thing it should be is products of the monopoly. A large 10 figure donation in cash to the proposed areas would be more inline. Let the scholl admins decide what and when they will purchase with the "MONEY". Its just a shame the DOJ and more so the courts had to be so spineless in this case. Oh well at least maybe some schools will get something out of it because the public at large is getting the usual shaft and someplace at the bottom is the gold that Microsoft will steal anyways.
